The Daughter of Ex-Governor Foster Leaves Her Husband, Frederick Mussey, the Private Secretary of Her Father-Gousip About the Cause.

[Cleveland (O.) Special.]

Ohlo society circles are in a flutter over separation and probable divorce in high life. The parties directly interested are Colonel Fred Mussey and his wife, who is the youngest daughter of ex-Governor Charles Foster. Mussey and his wife have been living apart for some weeks, Mrs. Mussey being at the home of her father at Fostoria, and Mr. Mussey making his head quarters at Columbus. The public an ouncement of the separation was made to day for the first time. Governor Foster went to Columbus in January, 1650, with Mrs. Foster and their two daughter, Misses Jessio and Annie. There were soveral as pirants for the position of Private Secre tary, which Mussey succeeded in getting The Governor had not known him excepby casual meeting during the campaign, is R. Brownlee has gone to Shelby after a time won the affection of the vounger daughter, Miss Annie, a lady of the most generous unpulse and of the truest traits of womanhood. The great difference in their age is sald to have been raised as an objection to the marriage, but Miss Annie, who was a niere girl as compared to the man of the world who had won her, was completely captivated and would of listen to the advice of others, not ever her own parents who carnestly oppose the match.

He was very attentive before the man riage, so much so that the fact was freand with good wishes that the affection ovinced might never be lessened by the trials of life. The courting was done before the marriage. The wedding was one of the most brilliant ones ever known at the capital. The wedding day is still remembered. General Sain F. Hunt was the groom's best man. All remember the arm of her father as the bridal party entored the church and the Governor gave They took a trip to Europe, but there was o'clock in the morning, while the gruom time. Norther side is known to have told for some time what could not be cured in order to avoid publication.

It was common talk in Columbus after their return from Europe that the couple did not seem to be so much attached as before the marriage. Mr. Mussey soldom spent the evening at home. He was genrully to be found up the street at the hotels or restaurants, and Mrs. Mussey went to parties with her sister. This became the town talk among society people at Columbus. Mrs. Mussey, finding that she could no longer tive happily with her husband, left hun forever a few weeks ago and sought the seclusion of her father's house in Fos toria. Mussey has been all his life an adventuror. He has been accustomed to disregard the feelings of men by criticism, regardless of consequences, and this some-times may lead to a tendency to look on all womankind with more or less disrespect. Neither party is likely ever to tell the past, they were married, and, like so many of the brilliant sproad woldings, the seque has been a separation. Mrs. Mussey was never mistreated, according to what is generally known by that term, but they were not adapted by nature to wed, and found it out after marriage rather than bedoctor," gave a concert on postoffice fore it. The resolutions declare a deep interest by the business men of the city in the welfare of the country, and express a desire that President Arthur may be nominated for a number of reasons. He assumed the office under circumstances of great delicacy; he has borne limself, personally and officially, so as to inspire confidence; he has brought order out of confusion, and the country has been ponceful and safe and the Administra-tion has been pure. He has been President of the whole people, His financial views and his actions regarding the currency, re-duction of taxation, public economy and the proper protection of American industry most with our heartiest annumentation. He meet with our heartlest approbation. He is commonded for his efforts to separate is commonded for his efforts to separate eivil service from political partisanship. The judicial appointments have been impartial and tree from political bias. Judgos Gray and Blatchford are ented as examples. He has been President himself, and has not used his official patronage in any way to promote his own political future. All the Republican conventions have thus far approved inequalifiedly of his Administration. The last section of the resolution is as follows:
